

Mermaid activity in Bundefjorden Norway.

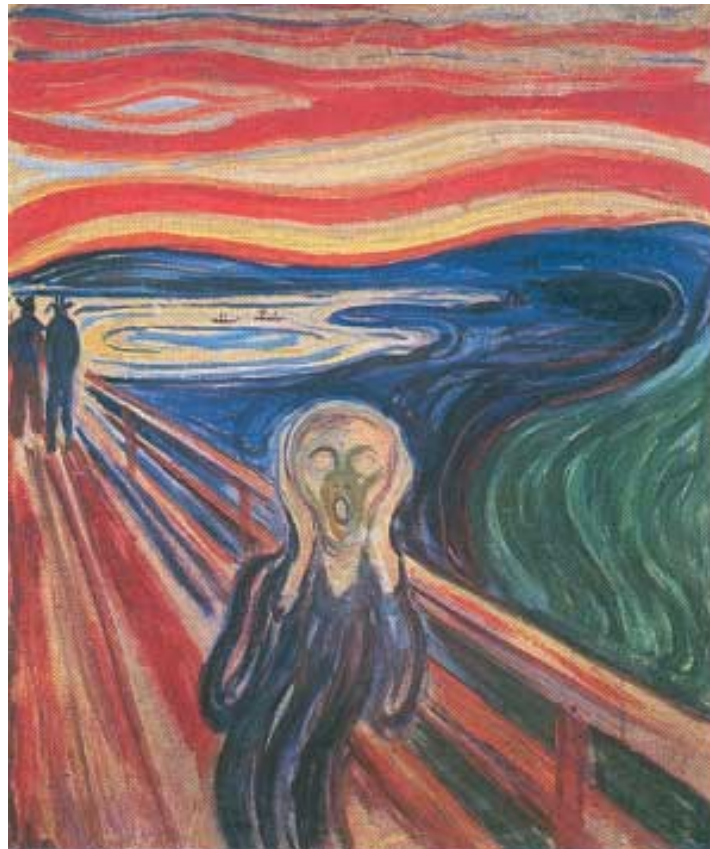

Bundefjorden is a small fjord outside the city of Oslo in Norway. The fjord is connected to the Atlantic ocean via the Oslofjord.

Bundefjorden is at the right on the map and the Oslofjord is at the left on the map. The orange area is the city of Oslo. In Bundefjorden there are several small islands. Today Bundefjorden is mostly used for recreation like swimming and sailing.

The Norwegian painter Edvard Munch painted several paintings from the area. He lived in the area in 1893, 1895, 1899, 1900 and 1901. He also did several paintings of mermaids.

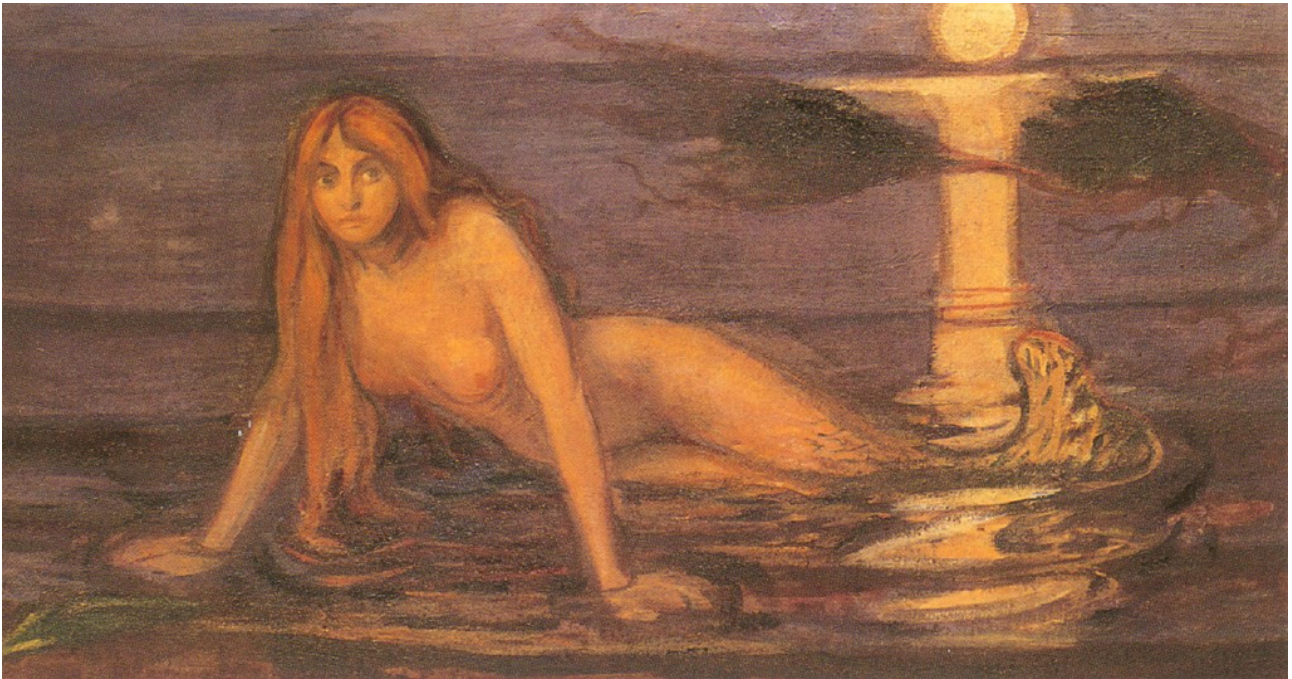

In the famous painting 'The Scream' you can see the Bundefjorden in the background.

In this picture he probably painted his encounter with a mermaid in Bundefjorden. The painting was done in 1896. He also made several other paintings of mermaids like this ones.

I think Edvard Munch had contacts with the merpeople and possibly met some of them.

In periods the Bundefjorden has been poluted from the city of Oslo and in this periods i don't think the mermaids was present. But recently the water has become cleaner and both dolphins and killer whales has visited the fjord. The mermaids visiting the fjord usually is the advanced type with teleport capasity. After a visit in 2014 they described parts of the sea bed in Bundefjorden as desertlike and muddy. But they liked the small islands in the fjord. The mermaids also visited the fjord in January 2015 in a high dimensional form, but they made patterns in the water that could be seen as letters. There has been reportet UFO activity over the fjord and in the 60s a child observed a spherical UFO going down into the water.

The mermaids in Bundefjorden usually are on a higher dimensionally frequency making them invisible, specially in winter when the water temperature is low. During summer when watertemperature is high from 20 degrees celsius and up, they may appear on the physical plane.

Picture taken in January 2015 in Bundefjorden showing 2 small mermaids. They were on a higher dimensional frequency and special technique was used to make them partly visible. It's possible that merpeople have a sort of base at the bottom of Bundefjorden and that base is visited regularly by UFOs. There have been observations of UFOs flying at low altitude over the water and even landed on the water. Bundefjorden is up to 150 meters deep at the deepest.
